

International Residence

Kobe University has several dormitories for international students and scholars such as Kobe University International Residence, SUMIYOSHI International Student House, SUMIYOSHI Residence, International Residence at Fukae Campus, and Dormitory “Hakuo-ryo”, providing support for the university’s academic and cultural exchange programs. Kobe University International Residence is exclusive to international students and scholars, but other dormitories are mixed with Japanese students of Kobe University. The resident fees vary on the type of each room. There are also boarding houses run by public and private organizations available for international students and scholars. For more information please visit the following websites.

Rent Subsidy System

Kobe University has a rent subsidy system for eligible international researchers who agree to live in one of the private or public-run apartments designated by the University in the event there is no room available in either of the two dormitories (International Residence and International House). Under this system, the University will pay for approximately one half the monthly rent. However, individual resident must pay utilities.
