

Working in a spirit of sincerity, freedom, and cooperation, the Faculty of Health Sciences, School of Medicine, Kobe University defines its basic philosophy as follows: To provide excellent education in the areas of healthcare and health sciences, thereby nurturing health professionals who possess highly specialized knowledge and skills, as well as high ethical standards and a well-grounded scientific perspective. The Faculty also aims to inspire a great sense of inquiry and creativity in its students, so that they will be able to play an active international role in the future, as leaders in their respective fields.

the School has established the following policies for conferring the Bachelor's degree, based on the University's policy for conferring degrees.

Degree: Bachelor of Science (Nursing)    Department of Nursing

1. The School has set its learning goal in the Department of Nursing of the School of Medicine's Faculty of Health Sciences awards this degree as acquiring the following abilities in addition to the virtues prescribed by the University's policy on conferring degrees.

- The fundamental abilities necessary to become a nursing professional: possession of a strong sense of humanity and education, high ethical standards in healthcare, flexibility, cooperativeness, and the ability to understand the client's perspective. (Humanity and Ethics)
- The ability to empower oneself through continuous lifelong learning, not only as a nursing professional but also as a person. (Humanity and Ethics)
- The ability to interpret phenomena logically and generate new nursing methods from a caring outlook. (Creativity)
- The ability to take the initiative and act autonomously, and explore the distinctive aspects and professionalism of nursing. (Creativity)
- The fundamental ability to be work in both local and international societies while respecting diverse cultures and values. (Local and international awareness)
- The interest in and ability to explore a variety of local and international well-being and health issues. (Local and international awareness)
- The ability to practice nursing with extensive knowledge, reliable nursing techniques, and an enriched sensibility, while aiming to improve people's quality of life (QOL). (Specialization and Collaboration)
- The ability to collaborate with related occupations within a healthcare/welfare team as a nursing professional who has acquired basic learning and expertise in medical care. (Specialization and Collaboration)
- The ability to exhibit leadership through scientific and logical thinking, executive ability, and competent communication skills. (Specialization and Collaboration)

2. The School's graduation requirement for the conferring of the Bachelor of Science (Nursing) is to attend Kobe University for the prescribed period of time, to acquire the credits stipulated in the University's rules for the Faculty/School of Nursing, and to achieve the learning goals set by the University and the School.

Degree: Bachelor of Science (Medical Technology)    Department of Medical Technology

1. The School has set its learning goal in the Department of Medical Technology in the School of Medicine's Faculty of Health Sciences awards this degree as acquiring the following abilities in addition to the virtues prescribed by the University's policy on conferring degrees.

- Outstanding humanity required to be a member of medical team, research team, or educational team. (Humanity and Ethics)
- A code of conduct with high ethical standards. (Humanity and Ethics)
- The ability to be an active member at the forefront of medical society in areas including clinical, research and educational activities. (Humanity and Ethics)
- The enterprising spirit and flexible imagination required to tackle problems. (Creativity)
- The ability to strive towards new technologies and the development of equipment that can contribute to society. (Creativity)
- The ability to play a central role in regional medical care; in areas such as diagnosis and early detection of diseases, treatment evaluation, and understanding of health conditions. (Local and International Awareness)
- The ability to consider inspection techniques and medical care from an international perspective. (Local and International Awareness)
- The ability to use English in order to collect and present academically appropriate information and communicate well with third parties. (Local and International Awareness)
- The ability to learn independently in order to acquire a high level of expertise and inspection skills relating to medical examination technology. (Specialization and Collaboration)
- The ability to contribute towards the improvement of human welfare in cooperation with medical staff and scientists. (Specialization and Collaboration)

2. The School's graduation requirement for the conferring of the Bachelor of Science (Medical Technology) is to attend Kobe University for the prescribed period of time, to acquire the credits stipulated in the University's rules for the School of , Medical Technology and to achieve the learning goals set by the University and the School.

Degree: Bachelor of Science (Physical Therapy)    Department of Physical Therapy

1. The School has set its learning goal in the Department of Physical Therapy in the School of Medicine's Faculty of Health Sciences awards this degree as acquiring the following abilities in addition to the virtues prescribed by the University's policy on conferring degrees.

- The ability to engage in clinical practice as a healthcare professional with excellent sense of humanity and high ethical standards in healthcare. (Humanity and Ethics)
- The ability to create future types of physical therapy and related fields by mastering standard physical therapy theories and skills, in addition to identifying and solving issues with energetic spirit of inquiry and creativity. (Creativity)
- The ability to produce evidence through basic and/or clinical studies by respecting the knowledge of their predecessors. (Creativity)
- The ability to contribute towards society by developing an understanding of various regional issues. (Local and International Awareness)
- The fundamental ability to play an active role internationally with their physical therapy theories and skills. (Local and International Awareness)
- The ability to collaborate with related occupations within a healthcare/welfare team as health professional who has mastered the foundations of medicine and possesses a high level of expertise, by establishing mutual trust with clients and other health providers, and building good relationships. (Specialization and Collaboration)

2. The School's graduation requirement for the conferring of the Bachelor of Science (Physical Therapy) is to attend Kobe University for the prescribed period of time, to acquire the credits stipulated in the University's rules for the School of Physical Therapy, and to achieve the learning goals set by the University and the School.

Degree: Bachelor of Science (Occupational Therapy)    Department of Occupational Therapy

1. The School has set its learning goal in the Department of Occupational Therapy in the School of Medicine's Faculty of Health Sciences awards this degree as acquiring the following abilities in addition to the virtues prescribed by the University's policy on conferring degrees.

- The ability to proactively contribute the development of society by acquiring an excellent sense of humanity and high ethical standards as a professional occupational therapist. (Humanity and Ethics)
- The ability to be deeply empathic towards individual clients, understand their characteristics, respect their human rights and provide support for their independence. (Humanity and Ethics)
- The practical ability to set and achieve their own targets with a sense of inquiry and creativity. (Creativity)
- The ability to scientifically analyze and logically consider problems in order to solve them.

(Creativity)

- Possessing a broad perspective and the ability to utilize expert knowledge related to occupational therapy in order to contribute towards the local community through multi-occupational collaboration. (Local and International Awareness)
- The ability to organize and understand their own issues from a global perspective and to make accurate presentations and communicate smoothly. (Local and International Awareness)
- The ability to learn independently and continuously in order to acquire the expert knowledge and skills pertaining to advanced occupational therapy across various fields such as medical, health, and welfare. (Specialization and Collaboration)
- The ability to demonstrate superior coordination skills and collaborate with related occupations as an advanced medical professional in healthcare/welfare team. (Specialization and Collaboration)

2. The School's graduation requirement for the conferring of the Bachelor of Science (Occupational Therapy) is to attend Kobe University for the prescribed period of time, to acquire the credits stipulated in the University's rules for the School of , Occupational Therapy and to achieve the learning goals set by the University and the School.